HINTS ON KITCHEN ECONOMY.

Cleanliness is the most essential ingredient in the art of cooking; a dirty kitchen being a disgrace both to mistress and maid.

Be clean in your person, paying particular attention to the hands, which should always be clean.

Do not go about slipshod. Provide yourself with good, well fitting boots. You will find them less fatiguing in a warm kitchen than loose, intidy alippers.

Provide yourself with a dozen good sized serviceable cooking aprons, made with bibs. These will save your gowns, and keep you meat and clean. Have them made large enough around so as to nearly meet behind.

Never waste or throw away anything that can be turned to account.

Never waste or throw away any-thing that can be turned to account. In saran weather, any gravies or soup that are left from the prece-ding day should be just boiled up, and poured into clean pans. This is particularly necessary where vegetables have been added to the preparation, as it then so soon turns sour. In cooler weather every other ar. In cooler weather every other day will be often enough to warm day will be often enough to warm up these things.

If you have a spare kitchen cup-board, keep your baked pastry in it; it preserves it crisp, and prevents it from becoming wet and heavy, which it is liable to do in the lar-der.

sinks, plates, spoons and other utensils to accumulate on the dressers and tables whilst you are engaged in preparing the dinner. By a little management and forethought much confusion may be saved in this way. It is as easy to put a thing in its place when it is done with, as it is to keep continually moving it to find room for fresh requisites. For instance, after making a pudding, the flour tub, pasteboard and rolling pin should be put away, and any basins, spoons, etc, taken to the scullery, neatly packed up near the sink, to be washed when the proper time arrives. Neatness, order and method should be observed.

salt, seasonings, etc., dwindle down so low that, some day in the midst of preparing a big disner you find yourself minus a very important ingredient, thereby causing much confusion and annoyance.

A DIOUGHTFUL DOO.

Mrs. J. is the owner of a fine Requimanx dog, and is the mother of a beautiful little girl, of whom the dog at first was very jealous. His better nature, however, soon asserted litself, and he became very fond of the child. A few weeks ago the baby was crying loud and long. Doggie came up stairs in evident distress of spirit, whined in answer to the child's cry; but finally, as if a sudden thought had startled him, trotted quickly down stairs. He presently returned with a bone, well picked, of course in his mouth, which standing on his hind legs, he gravely presented to the baby.

PRITABLE COMMUNICATION

The National Grange.

GART HOUSE, LOUISVILLE KENTUCKY, Nov. 39, 1875. The proceedings of the last tw days relate principally to the report of the Committee on Constitution and lowing:

1. Amend the preamble to the constitu-tion, under the head of "Organizations," by striking out all under that head, and in-serting the following:

1. Subordinate Granges, composed of persons possessing the requisites of mem-hership named in the Constitution of the Order, not less than thirteen in number, unne-of whom shall be men, and four women.

2. District Granges, not to exceed one

S. State Granges, composed of persons to are members in good standing of a Sub-dinate Grange, who have taken five de-cess in the Order, and who shall have been owen representatives by the Subordinate augus to which they become, its such man-tices. " DEGREES,

"There shall be six degrees in the Order of Patrons of Husbandry, known as the First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, and Sixth; the first four of which shall be conferred upon all initiates of the Order, as a material content of right, without any charge therefor in addition to the fee for membership, and the other two shall be conferred upon all applicants therefor who have taken the four full along degrees, and who, upon examination, have shown themseives proficient therein, have shown themseives may be conferred in the Subordinfate Grange.

The first article proposes a remove

By the third article, the organization the State Grange. It also gives to subordinate Granges the right to cor fer all the degrees, thus making all the amendments awaken, of the liveliest in-terest conceivable. The Chairman of the Committee and the Worthy Master of the Texas State Grange took the lead in their advocacy, while members oo numerous to mention, spoke, one after another, in opposition to them. Here, for the first time in the session Mr. Lang, the Worthy Master of our Texas State Grange, became fully aroused. Undismayed by number and strength in the opposition, and true to his convictions of duty, he shood firm to the democratic principles in volved in the amendments, meeting argument with argument and parrying every thrust made at his positions with the utmost skill and ability. To my self, at least, his position appeared impregnable, and I cannot but think, even yet, that his arguments were alto-gether unanswerable; albeit, on yote of the Grange (including, of course the lady members) the proposed amendments were stricken out as a whole. Although thus beaten by numerical force, it was indisputably a triumphant intellectual victory for the Wortby Master of our Texas State Grange, and though "not a prophet or the son of a prophet," I venture to the same in substance will vet, in time own, the report being a simple digest ast, for his connection with the whisky ring, of the mass of matter sent to the committee from the membership in the intermediate and State Greeners. of the mass of matter sent to the com-conclusion, may rest assured that its very interest is carefully studied and ative; and the Order, as a whole, fer some of the most valuable sugges tions that have ever yet been presented to the National Grange. J. W. D.
